

7 Bachelor Programs in Chinese Studies

Scroll to programs ↓Home > Bachelor > Chinese Studies

Are you looking to further your education and attract more employers? A bachelor's degree can get you there. This degree enables you to pursue your chosen field and may also allow you to take unrelated courses that expand your knowledgebase and help you become a well-rounded individual.

Whether you have always had an interest in Asian studies or have recognized the upward trajectory of China, a bachelor's degree in Chinese studies is a rewarding and proactive course of study to pursue. What is a Bachelor in Chinese Studies? It's a degree that may give you the opportunity to study Chinese language, art, history, economy, culture, and more. Many schools may also offer the opportunity to study abroad in China to further expand your knowledge.

A strong education can equip you with the skills to succeed in your career and life. Language skills often have the potential to set you apart in industries that have relationships in China, including politics, business, sales, and consulting. An advanced understanding in arts and culture can give you the opportunity to enhance your personal life and career.

The country where you study and the specific tuition and credit fees of your school will determine the cost of your Chinese studies education. Another cost factor to take into consideration is the length of time it takes you to complete your degree.

Once you have graduated with a Bachelor in Chinese studies, you may have a variety of career opportunities in exciting industries. These potential careers paths include anything from translators and interpreters to lawyers and consultants working with China-related businesses. In countries where Chinese is not the native tongue, a student's ability to read, write, speak, and translate this integral and burgeoning language typically helps secure an advanced position faster.

This versatile degree is offered around the globe and may be completed via on-campus classes, virtual classes, or hybrid schedules, often in as little as four years. Search for your program below and contact directly the admission office of the school of your choice by filling in the lead form.